WHEN: Thursday, March 8, 2007, 2:30-4:30 pm

Consul General, The Honorable Jinzhou HUA, and Consul and Director of Cultural Affairs, Jiping LI (Mrs. Hua), of People's Republic of China have invited us to be their special guests for High Tea on March 8 (Women's Day in China). Several offices of the Consulate General, including Consul and Director Weiping ZHA, and Consul Shixing WU of Education, are collaborating to host this event. The site is the residential compound built for Consul General and Consuls of the Consulate General of China in Houston. This event will be a unique Chinese version of High Tea with an introduction to and presentation of Chinese culture.

Directions: Hepburn Street is inside loop 610 in the SW part of the city. If you go south on Almeda from the Medical Center area, turn right on Hepburn. It is south of Old Spanish Trail and north of Holly Hall. The compound is surrounded by a wall, and they will have the gates opened for us. (This site is usually not opened to the public and is different from the offices of the Consulate General of China on Montrose Blvd.)

What to wear? Business attire or something suitable for a high tea.

Why are they all smiling? You had to have been there to know! While discussing her book, Is God Pink? Dying to Heal, Mary Jo Rapini (center) spoke to everyone present about her near-death experience after suffering a brain aneurysm. This was followed by a discussion about "intimacy and enhancing communication in your marital life". The group above attended the FW&WF February program held at Mary Jo Rapini's home on February 7. BOOK: Old School, by Tobias Wolff

Determined to fit in at his New England prep school, the narrator has learned to mimic the bearing and manners of his adoptive tribe while concealing as much as possible about himself. His final year, however, unravels everything he's achieved, and steers his destiny in directions no one could have predicted. In this novel we see vulnerable and clumsy youth parallel to the polished and comfortable status which class and money provide. We meet determination, impersonation, and observation as the future opens and closes with perennial flair.

BOOK: The Crow Eaters, by Bapsi Sidhwa

Loading his pregnant wife, infant daughter, and widowed mother-in-law into a bullock cart, Faredoon Junglewalla leaves his ancestral village in the forests of central India, bound for the bustling city of Lahore. Despite the nagging of his unbearable mother-in-law, Freddy's business and family flourish, and he soon becomes a patriarchal figure in the thriving Parsee community. This endearing family saga provides a vibrant window onto life in India under British colonial rule and a nation on the threshold of historic transformation.
